

Can You Put a Veneer on a Rotten Tooth?

Veneers are custom-made thin shells and molding, generally made from composite or porcelain material. Cosmetic dentistry veneers apply them to the front eight teeth to conceal damage, chips, wear, or discolored teeth. Moreover, they are also used to cover the gap between your teeth if other treatments aren't suitable.

They are very popular because they provide the same teeth as the natural finish and offer a long-term solution to many dental problems. Veneers can be used to treat dental issues such as:

- Crooked teeth or minor knocked
- Chipped teeth
- Stained and discolored teeth
- Large gaps between teeth
- Misshapen or misaligned teeth

However, veneers can not treat,

- Decayed or cavity teeth
- If you are suffering from gum disease or infection
- Root canal infections or pulpitis

Are veneers bad for your teeth?

Various myths revolve around that veneers are bad for your teeth, but in reality, they provide confidence and an aesthetic look to your teeth.

Can you get veneers if you have bad teeth?

Veneers can help you transform and restore your smile and boost your confidence in all areas of your life.

They are perfect for correcting the aesthetic appearance of your smile and fixing various cosmetic issues such as discoloration and gaps between your teeth as well as mild fractured or cracked teeth.

Your dentist may suggest veneers if you have bad breath and chipped teeth. Also, they will show some before and after veneer pictures. Therefore you should consider visiting the Best Dentist For Veneers for a thorough checkup and treatment.

What are dental veneers?

If you are considering veneers, it is essential that you can understand what exactly they are and whether you are the perfect candidate for veneers or not. With any cosmetic dentistry treatment, your teeth are hygienic and healthy or free from decay or infection before the procedure starts. During the initial consultation, your dentist performs digital scanning and X-rays to ensure your teeth are infection free and suitable for treatment.

Can you get veneers with crooked and decayed teeth?

Your dentist can apply veneers if your teeth are crooked or uneven; they are custom-made to fit well because each person has a different teeth structure and color. Sometimes they use veneers when you have problems like overbite or underbites.

However, veneers can not be applied to decayed and cavity teeth. Initially, cosmetic dentist Uptown examines your structure for infection or cavity before applying veneer shells to your teeth.

If you want to proceed with veneers, your dentist initially removes the decayed part and treats it with composite material. If you have a gum infection, they will treat it before the Best Veneers. Moreover, suppose they apply veneers on infectious and cavity teeth. In that case, they will become more severe and susceptible to other diseases, and even tooth loss is possible.

Conclusion:

You can't get dental veneers if you have cavities or infectious teeth. But Your dentist initially treats other dental problems before having a veneer. Therefore you should consider visiting a dentist if you have cavities or infections around your teeth before dental veneers.

Article Source : <https://www.transitsblog.com/can-you-put-a-veneer-on-a-rotten-tooth/>