They are thin, stain resistant, and durable enough to resist the natural wear and tear your teeth undergo daily. They're also an ideal choice for those with gaps between teeth.

Different types of veneers

Veneers come in three main types of materials, each with its own set of pros and cons:

Porcelain Veneers

The majority of people mainly use these to treat their cosmetic issues. It is used to make small changes to your teeth' shape, size and colour. There are many more benefits of porcelain veneers, include

- Porcelain veneers are thin as compared to other dental veneers.
- They look natural, like your teeth and give a realistic appearance to your teeth when you smile or talk.
- These veneers can last upto 10 year or more with proper care.
- In many cases, the dentist does not need to shave your tooth enamel.

It has all the benefits, but remember that porcelain veneers may be costly and need special polishing paste to give that natural shade. They are undoubtedly durable and robust but may need to be changed if broken.

Ceramic Veneers

They are also the most popular types of veneers, and dentists use them generally and consider them to be a fantastic option for many patients due to their:

- They provide a natural appearance.

- They give your teeth the ability to function normally like the other teeth.
- They are solid and durable.

They have many benefits, like porcelain veneers, but keep in mind that ceramic veneers may take longer to be designed than others. These veneers may give your teeth a slight sensitivity for a few days after the treatment; it is not permanent, and the sensitivity will fade away within a few days.

Composite Veneers

These veneers are cost-efficient, and due to this, many people prefer choosing composite veneers, which are the most used veneer that patients opt for. They are the best as they give all the benefits the other veneers give, look like your natural teeth and function the same. They are usually placed in a single treatment session. Other benefits of this type of veneer include the following;

- They are easy to install as they require less tooth preparation than other veneers.
- It is cost-efficient and has half of the porcelain veneers.

They appear to be cost-efficient, but they can also be prone to stain, break, or chip. Unlike porcelain veneers, they have approximately five years' lifespan.
