

6 Cs of Happy Marriages

Marriage is not just a ritual ceremony that takes place once in the lifetime of an individual. It's something more than that. In real terms, marriage is such a bonding of life that goes on with the life in the eternal ways.

When we gauge a wedding in the real terms, we find that it is a pillar made of unlimited variables that you can't experience unless you get married to a compatible life partner. Some of these variables include emotions, desires, psychology and the very personalities of two people.

A marriage becomes successful only when it consists of a mix of Compatibility, Commitment, Chemistry, Communication, Community and Compassion.

Compatibility- A happy married life demands the right values and interests between two married couples.

Chemistry- It's the right attribute required to be present in both the wedding couple that makes one comfortable with the other.

Commitment- The understanding and willingness of each partner towards making their relationship work under all circumstances.

Community- It's a network of family members and friends to better support and nurtures the wedding couple.

Communication- It's an explicit way to share and express the feelings with each other.

Compassion- It's the most extensive quality of humans necessary to develop a marriage into a successful relationship.

All the above findings actually correlate with each person as per the given situation. In fact, all the above factors suit in the lives of wedding couples who are looking to find their ideal life partners.

So, marriage seekers who are searching for the right match would definitely like to meet with people of diverse nature. While finding the right life partner, most users simply like to set filters so as to meet only those who are similar in the qualities that they actually like to see in them.

There are different views regarding the diversity in finding the right set of people for marriage. For example, we came across with someone in Mumbai who simply wants to marry with someone who is just the opposite in their desired qualities.

On the other hand, another person living in New York shared his thought with us. He says there is no point marrying with someone having the desired qualities. Instead, two diverse people are known to form a common whole. Whereas, another person considers that common interests actually leads to a happy married life.

At NRI MARRIAGE BUREAU, we look forward at all times to apply new learning in almost every field to enable our clients in moving their first step towards a successful and a happy married life.