

How To Do An Emergency Tooth Extraction?

If you have a cracked tooth, and a crown or root canal is not an option, your dental services near me may simply tell you that your tooth needs to be extracted. You shouldn't be nervous because the process is easy to have done and there are numerous dentists available in your nearest location who can do this for you.

Pulling Your Tooth

Many people hate going to the walk in dentist, especially if a tooth needs to be removed or filled. A broken tooth can be painful, but it may not mean that it needs a dental bridge or root canal. You could be lucky and just need the cracked tooth to be extracted from your mouth. This tooth extraction depends on the type of tooth it is, how severe the crack is, and where it is located. For instance, a cracked wisdom tooth shouldn't need a crown since the wisdom tooth may eventually be removed in the future. Your dental provider might think the best option is to just pull the entire tooth out instead of saving it. Your mouth will be expertly prepared and numbed very well, especially close to the cracked tooth.

The cosmetic dentistry near me will then use a tool to crack the tooth, even more, to be able to pull it out easier. Parts of the tooth may have to be pulled out separately depending on the size and position of the tooth. You will be very numb and won't be able to feel a thing, except for some pressure from the removal. You will also feel some tugging and twisting. Some teeth will come out easier than others and your provider will do their best to pop the tooth and root out quickly. Once the tooth is finally out, you can relax knowing that it is finally done.

A Recovering Mouth

The process of emergency tooth extraction near me isn't so bad and your recovery shouldn't be either. The area where your tooth was pulled will probably bleed for a few hours. The doctor will stick some dressing in the area for you to bite down on and you will be sent home with some as well. This will allow you to change it every few hours so that the bleeding can slow down and it doesn't get infected. There are some rules to follow when you get home from the procedure. Don't drink out of a straw or smoke cigarettes. This can produce dry socket in the gum line, which can become infected and very painful.

Follow Doctor's Orders

Always follow your affordable dentist no insurance instructions and recommendations when you are sent home after the dental surgery near me. Any abnormal bleeding or pain should be reported within a few hours. Be sure to change the gauze and not sip through a straw. You can also take some pain relievers if you are feeling a little sore. The process is simple, safe, and very effective to get that cracked tooth removed from your mouth.
