

What Factors Can Affect The Work Of Invisalign?

According to the Invisalign dentist near me, if you want your Invisalign aligners to work effectively, you should wear these clear aligners for 20 to 22 hours a day. You should remove them when you eat or drink, sleep, or brush your teeth, and you should remove them. Be careful while cleaning your aligners. If you use boiling water, the plastic may deform. It can damage the fit and your progress and aligner efficiency. Your orthodontic difficulties' complexity may also influence how well Invisalign works for you.

If you have more complex spacing or biting concerns, this treatment may take longer to work. Tooth movement and wearer's age can also affect the effectiveness of Invisalign. The rate of motion of your teeth may increase slightly from ages 35 to 50. So, it means Invisalign may work more effectively for this age group. What can involve in wearing Invisalign clear aligners?

The first step in getting Invisalign involves visiting an orthodontist or Invisalign dentists near me, who will create a 3D image of your jaw and mouth. They will use that image to infuse a plan for shifting your teeth into the proper position. Your orthodontist will then use the plan to construct a series of custom plastic aligners. These aligners will gradually shift and move your teeth into the proper positions by applying pressure to them.

Depending on your dentist's or orthodontist's instructions, you'll switch from one set of aligners to another new set every week or two. Typically you have to wear these aligners for 20 to 22 hours a day.

How do Invisalign clear aligners feel?

One of the best to invest in Invisalign treatment is how comfortable and easy to wear these aligners are. Remember that your teeth are changing or shifting into a new position so that you may experience some discomfort, especially with the initial set of aligners. When you first put on a new set of aligners, the pressure on your teeth will gradually lessen over a few days.

Please contact a dental specialist who does Invisalign near me if you are experiencing any severe discomfort or pain. The dentist will take a thorough look at your teeth, gums, and aligners to make sure they fit correctly on your teeth.
