While mowing regularly is important to a wholesome lawn, avoid setting a fixed mowing schedule for your grass. You should know how fast it grows, you can always take suggestions from professional services for Lawn mowing in Thornhill Park.

As a thumb rule, to keep your lawn good you should not remove more than one-third of the grass shoot in a single mowing. Cutting more than that decreases the carbs that support healthy grass growth. Remove too much at once, and your lawn becomes more exposed to weather, insect, pests, bugs, and weeds. You should always mow when your lawn is dry; wet grass thuds and won't cut uniformly.

The guidelines for when to mow a newly established lawn after planting or when to mow new grass are different than for settled lawns. Recently seeded lawns may take one to two months of the time before they're ready for mowing. Wait to mow new grass until all of the seed has grown and it reaches one and one-half times its prescribed height. Professional services for lawn mowing in Cobblebank suggest that you have to mow after 2-3 weeks of planting seeds.

HOW TO MAINTAIN YOUR MOWER:

Proper maintenance of your mower and your grass help keep your fresh-cut lawn thick and healthy. These maintenance basics help ensure your lawn always looks its best:

- Sharpen your mower blades whenever they grow old. Do at least one careful or professional sharpening before the mowing season starts each season. Thick blades make rough cuts that develop the risk of pests and bugs. Take professional help for Lawn mowing in Toolern Vale.
