World Cup – France fined for advancing on haka

Tue, 25 Oct 12:15:00 2011

France have been fined £2,500 for advancing on the All Blacks during their haka before the World Cup final.

The New Zealand players were performing the ritual war dance when the French players linked arms and advanced slowly on their opponents, starting out in an arrow formation.

As the French got within a few yards of their opponents, the International Rugby Board has fined the team for breaching a "cultural ritual protocol" by crossing the half-way line during the haka.
