

	For	Against
Street art can show messages to a lot of people, and not only the ones who go to museums.
Graffiti should be banned because some graffiti destroy road signs and could cause road accidents.
Shop owners must clean their properties, or pay someone to repair the damage. Graffiti writers shouldn't affect other people's buildings!
Graffiti should be considered as art because some streets now look more attractive thanks to graffiti.
Streets are boring and dull without graffiti. It gives places a "soul" (=âme).
Graffiti is a sort of visual pollution.
If people think it's art and want it on their house, they should have it on their house but not on my building!
Local authorities waste (=gaspillent) a lot of money cleaning up graffiti.
Graffiti writers don't cause any other trouble, they just paint or write! They shouldn't be considered as outlaws (=bandits/hors-la-loi).
Graffiti comes with a message. It is about freedom of expression.
Some museums and art galleries now consider graffiti as art.
Graffiti attracts locals and tourists from all around the world.

	For	Against
Street art can show messages to a lot of people, and not only the ones who go to museums.
Graffiti should be banned because some graffiti destroy road signs and could cause road accidents.
Shop owners must clean their properties, or pay someone to repair the damage. Graffiti writers shouldn't affect other people's buildings!
Graffiti should be considered as art because some streets now look more attractive thanks to graffiti.
Streets are boring and dull without graffiti. It gives places a "soul" (=âme).
Graffiti is a sort of visual pollution.
If people think it's art and want it on their house, they should have it on their house but not on my building!
Local authorities waste (=gaspillent) a lot of money cleaning up graffiti.
Graffiti writers don't cause any other trouble, they just paint or write! They shouldn't be considered as outlaws (=bandits/hors-la-loi).
Graffiti comes with a message. It is about freedom of expression.
Some museums and art galleries now consider graffiti as art.
Graffiti attracts locals and tourists from all around the world.

	For	Against
Street art can show messages to a lot of people, and not only the ones who go to museums.
Graffiti should be banned because some graffiti destroy road signs and could cause road accidents.
Shop owners must clean their properties, or pay someone to repair the damage. Graffiti writers shouldn't affect other people's buildings!
Graffiti should be considered as art because some streets now look more attractive thanks to graffiti.
Streets are boring and dull without graffiti. It gives places a "soul" (=âme).
Graffiti is a sort of visual pollution.
If people think it's art and want it on their house, they should have it on their house but not on my building!
Local authorities waste (=gaspillent) a lot of money cleaning up graffiti.
Graffiti writers don't cause any other trouble, they just paint or write! They shouldn't be considered as outlaws (=bandits/hors-la-loi).
Graffiti comes with a message. It is about freedom of expression.
Some museums and art galleries now consider graffiti as art.
Graffiti attracts locals and tourists from all around the world.		