

FAMILY TREE

Summary

A family tree is a very important part of everyone's history. In this research, students will try to find out as much as possible about their family roots.

Subject of the study

Students families.

Aim of the study

Create your own family tree based on true facts.

How to investigate

Students will ask their family members for information about their ancestors and, if possible with the support of their parents, will visit archives.

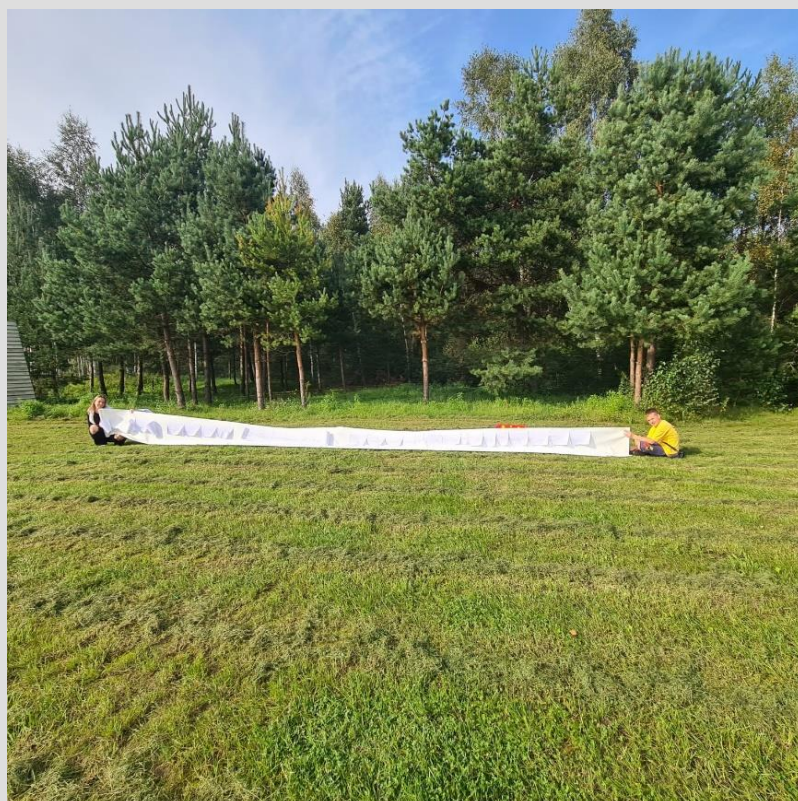

Results

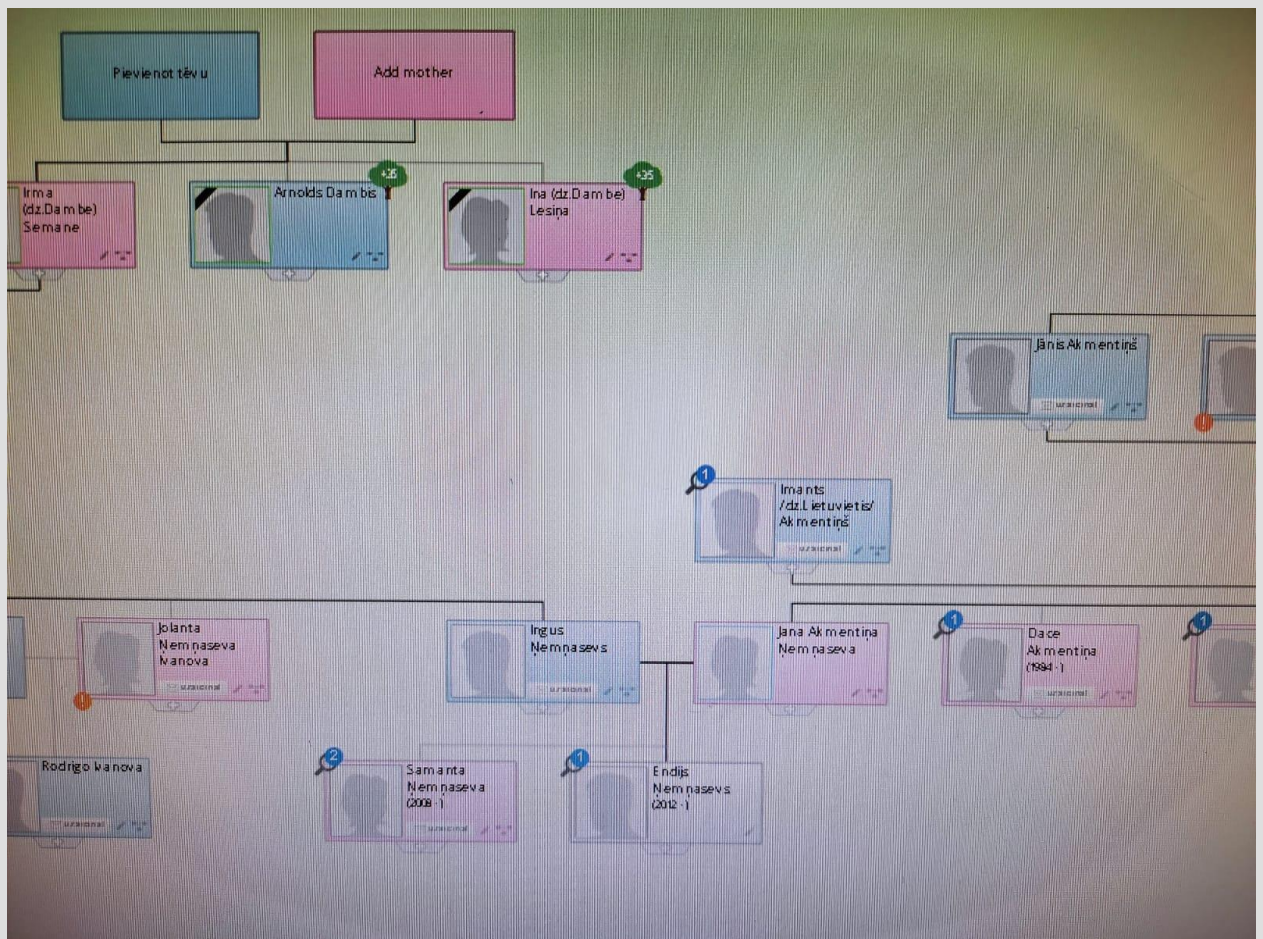

Look at the family trees of 3 students of Riga Lithuanian Secondary School.

- Gabriel from grade 3rd drew his family tree and wrote down the names of his ancestors. Mother helped them to find information.
- Metra from 4th grade: “I liked making a family tree because you can learn a lot about your ancestors. I found the information from my parents and grandparents by asking them. This is important to me because I am interested in who my ancestors are.”

- Endijs from 4th grade created a huge family tree with the help of his mom and sister. It took a piece of wallpaper roll to fit all the names of the ancestors. The family tree includes 686 people, of which 259 are blood relatives.

Conclusion

Interesting and great work has been done to study family trees by looking at the tree from this perspective. This work is a great contribution to the history of your family.
