

Tips for Bank Nifty Intraday Trading

What is Intraday Trading?

Under this trading, you sell and buy the stocks within 24 hours. Before the market closes, the squaring of all positions is done. By utilizing the stock index, stocks are bought and sold for making a profit and not for investment purposes. However, it is a bit perilous but a great way to make money.

What are Options and Bank Nifty?

Options

Options allow you the trading of shares before the final date. As a seller, you have to follow the transaction guidelines. The terms include buy or sell the share if the buyer decides to use their option before the expiry date of shares. NSE offers trade-in options as the underlying index of Nifty.

Bank Nifty

Bank Nifty is a group of top stocks from the banking sector. The stocks are mostly liquid and largely capitalized. These bank stocks are traded on the NSE (National Stock Exchange). It offers the information about market performance of the Indian banking sector, which tells a lot about the Indian economy.

Meanwhile, if the price of the stock goes up, you can sell it and make a profit. If the price is decreasing, wait for the settlement date. It can be used as the commodity market tips.

- Nifty Options - Under this derivative, both buyer and seller decide a price in present and then buy and sell the stock in the future on the decided price rate. Investors can trade the nifty on an intraday basis. Under intraday trading, the investor opens a position at the beginning of the day and closes it before the closing of the market on the same day. The intraday procedure is the same as the trading in options. Keep your eye on the volume and the price fluctuations of the particular stock.
