

A couple of ideas for Describing animals.

Can be used to repeat the names of animals, body parts, colours, as well as to practice and consolidate the following grammar structures: has got/hasn't got, likes/doesn't like, can/can't.

READING: Search for missing animals.

Hide animal cards in the classroom. Children are detectives.

Deal the cards with the descriptions (or make your ones) between the students. They should be suitable for the level of your students (blanks are attached). Kids read the texts and find the appropriate animals.

The best detective is considered to be the one (a pair or group), who finds more animals for a certain period of time.

WRITING. Zookeepers.

There are new animals in the zoo. But before letting visitors in, zookeepers should prepare the descriptions of all the inhabitants, their preferences and abilities for the guests to read (blanks are attached).

SPEAKING/LISTENING/ASKING QUESTIONS. Let's go to the zoo.

Choose 1-2 guides depending on the number of people in the group, divide the rest of the class into tourist groups. The task of the guides is to talk about the inhabitants of the zoo, and the task of curious visitors is to ask as many different questions as possible. If the guides don't know something, this is a great opportunity to use their imagination and create some incredible facts.

You may also use entrance tickets, which children can get by solving some riddles about animals as a warm-up activity.

P.S. if you have toy animals, it can be turned out into a trip to a petting zoo. Enjoy your zoo tour!
