

STEP 6 : Long is the road

Southbank's students _____ in the USA. They _____ in JFK airport, NYC. Elijah _____ the plane because he _____ his passport. He had left it in his _____, a chain of solidarity _____ him his passport just when the plane was going to close its doors. This adventure _____ comments from the parents and other people: What a day! I was so _____ when I _____ that Elijah finally _____ his passport!

Prétérit / Present perfect

A l'exception de la première phrase, tous les verbes sont ici conjugués au _____ (et non au _____) car on fait ici le _____ des aventures des personnages : la série d'événements est considérée comme appartenant au _____.

STEP 6 : Long is the road

Southbank's students _____ in the USA. They _____ in JFK airport, NYC. Elijah _____ the plane because he _____ his passport. He had left it in his _____, a chain of solidarity _____ him his passport just when the plane was going to close its doors. This adventure _____ comments from the parents and other people: What a day! I was so _____ when I _____ that Elijah finally _____ his passport!

Prétérit / Present perfect

A l'exception de la première phrase, tous les verbes sont ici conjugués au _____ (et non au _____) car on fait ici le _____ des aventures des personnages : la série d'événements est considérée comme appartenant au _____.

STEP 6 : Long is the road

Southbank's students _____ in the USA. They _____ in JFK airport, NYC. Elijah _____ the plane because he _____ his passport. He had left it in his _____, a chain of solidarity _____ him his passport just when the plane was going to close its doors. This adventure _____ comments from the parents and other people: What a day! I was so _____ when I _____ that Elijah finally _____ his passport!

Prétérit / Present perfect

A l'exception de la première phrase, tous les verbes sont ici conjugués au _____ (et non au _____) car on fait ici le _____ des aventures des personnages : la série d'événements est considérée comme appartenant au _____.