travail de repérage puis écriture d'une lettre: imagine the letter one of Henry's wife (Catherine of Aragon, Anne Boleyn, Jane Seymour, Anne of Cleves. Catherine Howard, Catherine Parr)

2) Separating from the English church (vidéo p 145) : 1528 Henry VIII wants to divorce Catherine of Aragon ☒ Pope denies the permission Anne Boleyn, Gives a banned book written by William Tyndale to Henry / Tyndale criticised the Pope / dreamt of people worshipping God with no church in between This book Planted a seed / idea to leave the Church of Rome No Pope = Divorce Parliament vote for leaving They can get the Church's land & Henry can marry Anne n the Tudor period, not even a king could simply decide to get a divorce.

If Katherine of Aragon had meekly accepted her fate, then English history may well have turned out rather differently. But Katherine was a proud and pious queen who believed that her marriage to Henry VIII was a sacred institution.

In 1527, the King began looking for a political and legal solution, petitioning the Pope and claiming that his marriage had never been legitimate because he had sinned in taking his brother's widow, which some scholars believed to be prohibited by the Bible.

Thomas Wolsey was charged with procuring the divorce. He failed, and his own career was destroyed in the process as the Pope refused to give into Henry's demands.

5) Catherine Howard : a ghost in the Tower of London

As Hallowe'en approaches, ghost stories abound. The nights are drawing in, darkness is falling and amidst the swirling mists of late autumn evenings come tales of mystery. This Hallowe'en, Royal Central is taking a look at some of the best known tales of regal ghosts and today we turn to the time of the Tudors and the sad story of a teenage queen, Catherine Howard whose downfall began the day after Hallowe'en.

The fifth wife of Henry VIII is said to run screaming through the royal palace where she discovered her king had abandoned her following accusations of adultery. Catherine Howard was in splendid residence at Hampton Court Palace when, on November 1st 1541, Henry was presented with evidence that the young wife he had publicly adored had been unfaithful to him.

The king was praying in the Chapel Royal as guards were sent to Catherine's rooms and she was told she was under arrest. Terror immediately descended on her and as preparations were made to take her into custody, she broke free and ran through the long gallery separating her from her husband. Her screams echoed through the famous palace as she tried to get Henry's attention in a frantic bid to remain free. She failed.

atherine was taken from Hampton Court that same day and would never see Henry again. She was imprisoned in Syon Abbey for three months before being taken to the Tower of London where she was executed on February 13th 1542.

Despite that, her ghost is said to haunt Hampton Court. For centuries, people have claimed to see and hear a young woman screaming as she runs along the corridor where Catherine made her bid for freedom. It is now called the Haunted Gallery.
