Streetball started in Rucker Park, Harlem, New York and in Venice Beach, Los Angeles, California in the 1970's.

Streetball is basketball, but with some differences. People play outdoors on smaller courts and they use only one basket. Streetball teams usually have only three players.

Streetball is a very popular variation of basketball where your style is essential. The rules are less strict because there is no referee. Of course, winning is important but players are more interested in the show than in the number of points. They also like to provoke their opponents with their spectacular moves and they are less disciplined than NBA players. Good players all have signature moves and nicknames. Streetball is usually more aggressive and rougher than basketball.

1. Referee : arbitre
