There is a dead man at the bar. He has blood on his suit. He was shot once in the back.

There are casino chips on the tables. There is a silencer too. There is a stage with a microphone and a black grand piano. There is a gun on the floor below the microphone.

I can see a broken bottle on the floor next to the victim. I can also notice a lady's bag by the piano.

The victim is Joe Costello. He looks like a gangster. He doesn't look very friendly. Maybe he was a gangster and he was killed by a rival. Maybe he was a detective and he was killed by a gangster. Maybe he was a regular customer and he was killed by a jealous husband.

Walter Felten isn't wearing a jacket, so maybe he was working behind the bar.

Duke Ellington could either be a customer or the jazz pianist.

The lady, Mary Russell, is well dressed so she could be the singer.

Frank O'Connell, the man with the hat covering his face, looks like a gangster, so maybe he was there with the victim.
