

Christmas in the US

American people decorate their Christmas trees with pop-corn threaded on string*. They like decorating their gardens with lights and gigantic statues of Santa, snowmen and reindeers.

Many churches have special Christmas Carol services and events where the story of Christmas is told. Many children believe in Santa Claus and they leave some cookies and glasses of milk as a snack for him. Children write and send letters to Santa Claus, to the North Pole.

On Christmas day, for lunch, American people often eat turkey with cranberry sauce, and they eat Christmas pudding for dessert, like in the UK.

A string = un fil*

Christmas in the US

American people decorate their Christmas trees with pop-corn threaded on string*. They like decorating their gardens with lights and gigantic statues of Santa, snowmen and reindeers.

Many churches have special Christmas Carol services and events where the story of Christmas is told. Many children believe in Santa Claus and they leave some cookies and glasses of milk as a snack for him. Children write and send letters to Santa Claus, to the North Pole.

On Christmas day, for lunch, American people often eat turkey with cranberry sauce, and they eat Christmas pudding for dessert, like in the UK.

A string = un fil*

Christmas in the US

American people decorate their Christmas trees with pop-corn threaded on string*. They like decorating their gardens with lights and gigantic statues of Santa, snowmen and reindeers.

Many churches have special Christmas Carol services and events where the story of Christmas is told. Many children believe in Santa Claus and they leave some cookies and glasses of milk as a snack for him. Children write and send letters to Santa Claus, to the North Pole.

On Christmas day, for lunch, American people often eat turkey with cranberry sauce, and they eat Christmas pudding for dessert, like in the UK.

A string = un fil*