

American schools on screen

Sue is a European exchange student who spent a school year in an American high school.

Clubs

In the US, school is not only viewed as a learning environment, but it is supposed to be interactive and fun as well. That's why you will find numerous possibilities to participate in sports and other clubs. I tried to fit as many activities as possible into my schedule so I joined a couple of clubs, the Drama Club and the French Club. I also participated in several events with the Student Council.

School spirit

First thing that I have to admit, I love the American school spirit: 'Go Wolverines!'. I had never experienced anything like that before and I was especially excited at my first Homecoming Week (also known as Spirit Week). For everyone who does not know what Homecoming is, it is the week of the first football game at home. During this week, the whole school gets dressed up every day with a different theme, there are games played during lunch and hallways are decorated, too. At the end of the week, a pep rally and a parade take place. In addition, the Homecoming king and queen are elected during the football game. It is an amazing experience, which everyone is part of.

My advice: don't be scared to try new things and be open-minded, you won't regret it!

Source: www.girlxdeparture.com

American schools on screen

Sue is a European exchange student who spent a school year in an American high school.

Clubs

In the US, school is not only viewed as a learning environment, but it is supposed to be interactive and fun as well. That's why you will find numerous possibilities to participate in sports and other clubs. I tried to fit as many activities as possible into my schedule so I joined a couple of clubs, the Drama Club and the French Club. I also participated in several events with the Student Council.

School spirit

First thing that I have to admit, I love the American school spirit: 'Go Wolverines!'. I had never experienced anything like that before and I was especially excited at my first Homecoming Week (also known as Spirit Week). For everyone who does not know what Homecoming is, it is the week of the first football game at home. During this week, the whole school gets dressed up every day with a different theme, there are games played during lunch and hallways are decorated, too. At the end of the week, a pep rally and a parade take place. In addition, the Homecoming king and queen are elected during the football game. It is an amazing experience, which everyone is part of.

My advice: don't be scared to try new things and be open-minded, you won't regret it!

Source: www.girlxdeparture.com

American schools on screen

Sue is a European exchange student who spent a school year in an American high school.

Clubs

In the US, school is not only viewed as a learning environment, but it is supposed to be interactive and fun as well. That's why you will find numerous possibilities to participate in sports and other clubs. I tried to fit as many activities as possible into my schedule so I joined a couple of clubs, the Drama Club and the French Club. I also participated in several events with the Student Council.

School spirit

First thing that I have to admit, I love the American school spirit: 'Go Wolverines!'. I had never experienced anything like that before and I was especially excited at my first Homecoming Week (also known as Spirit Week). For everyone who does not know what Homecoming is, it is the week of the first football game at home. During this week, the whole school gets dressed up every day with a different theme, there are games played during lunch and hallways are decorated, too. At the end of the week, a pep rally and a parade take place. In addition, the Homecoming king and queen are elected during the football game. It is an amazing experience, which everyone is part of.

My advice: don't be scared to try new things and be open-minded, you won't regret it!

Source: www.girlxdeparture.com

