READING : Read the following text and answer the questions

All four Beatles had begun to look for more in life than just the Beatles. An Indian guru (a teacher) known as the Maharishi taught them to spend time each day in quiet thought. They were with the Maharishi when they heard some terrible news. Brian Epstein was dead, after accidentally taking too many sleeping pills. They had relied on him to organise everything for them.

That year brought another shock for the Beatles. A film they made called the Magical Mystery Tour, about them going on a bus trip with some friends, was not a success. Up to that point everybody had loved everything they did, but now Beatlemania was over. They were still hugely popular, however, and a cartoon based on Paul's song 'Yellow Submarine' was a big hit.

The Beatles were drifting apart. They had all got married and were following their own interests. Even so they made two more terrific albums. The first, 'Abbey Road', has the famous cover which shows them on the pedestrian crossing outside the studios where they recorded all their songs. Tourists still come from all over the world to be photographed on the same spot.
